"INTO SUCH AN ORGANIZATION"

To the secretary of the Associated Alumni, after the annual alumni reception last May, came this note:

"May I thank you and the members of the Associated Alumni who were such gracious hosts yesterday? It was a pleasure to meet personally those of whom we hear on the campus, and to know that when we are finally called upon to be part of such an organization."

To those who are already alumni, the point of this little note, aside from its thoughtfulness, is the indication of what the undergraduate and graduate thinks the Alumni association is—what it expects to be.

"Into such an organization" he counts on entering when he leaves the university. If the older members of the Alumni do not maintain a plan that equals the expectations of the graduate, the young man will be disappointed; if merely disappointed; they will place it on that plane themselves. Those who are already in the organization will be disappointed if they lengthen their stride to keep up with those who are so eager to look forward to participating again in the Y.W.M.F. affairs, or they may drop behind the procession.

Conversation in journalism is one of the many topics which are being discussed now and can at the present time. To be or not to be is the question. It has recently come to my attention that the students are shocked at the sensibilities of some of our conventional readers. Our policy is more or less governed by the standards of the editor and the staff can live up to them. However, we are tempted through ignorance, or maybe through laziness, to let the standards of convention into the green pastures of the forbidden. Needless to say, criticism has been received.

For the sake of those who criticize, we do not pretend to run a perfect paper. If we were capable, our efforts might be better rewarded. We are not perfect, but we are trying. The "Literary Digest" is it granted, without argument, that we do not possess the intellect of the "New York Times." We are not perfect, but we are a slim chance of ever doing so. But we are in college to learn. We are running "The Y News" as a school paper, not as an experiment station, where we can find the best methods by the trial and error method. We are not perfect, but we are members in school who cause disagreeable tastes and odors. We are not perfect, but we are readers who suffer from shock sensations. We will recall that that is how Columbus discovered America.

to very rare skill in basketball the gym is too small to accommodate the entire student body. We have now increased the number of students in this case by changing a basketball into a trim size. This would be a good idea for many students in this school who cannot afford more than the minimum amount of equipment that would be done and that plan killed two birds with one stone. It would be a good idea to add a few more to the game and added a little to our budget.

If it has been announced now, that all students who go to the basketball games will be charged a dollar, that is a good idea for that student who is going to be charged a dollar.

In view of the fact that there are plenty of seats for all who will care to sit down and watch the game, we will not charge, except that of raising money for the basketball team, for the project, but when we pay at the beginning of the year we have a natural division of the money. A dollar is not a great deal, but it happens to be more than a good many of us can use for a football contest.

Our goal is to have a good project and shall do what we can to receive the wholehearted support of the students, parents, and faculty. We will not be able to do much with the money that we have, but we will impress visitors; but it is the object of college football to impress visitors or help the spirit of the student to do well in the game.

We understand that a large number of students will be interested in the music and will be interested in the band.

We also wonder what will be the result of the football game, who will win.

Vincent And Thompson New Life Members

One hundred forty-six life members on October 15—the average of five new life members per month is maintained. Paul Vincent, "the record holder," Teliferus, Salt Lake City paper of Provo, and Leo Thompson, 26, former vice president of the student body, and now instructor in home economics at the Pleasant Grove high school.

Continuing the plan of fitting by classes the past members of the Associated Alumni, the following is given:

1906 C. Clark, Provo

Effie Howes Miller, Idaho Falls, Idaho

Verde Maynard, Provo

E. McLean, Provo

G. P. Parker, Provo

We understand that a large number of students will be interested in the music and will be interested in the band.

That is a fine display and all the students will be interested in the band.

We will impress visitors; but it is the object of college football to impress visitors or help the spirit of the student to do well in the game.

We also wonder what will be the result of the football game, who will win.

OPINIONS

At the beginning of the football season it was announced that for the first four games the students of the school would be admitted on free activity cards. This was right and proper, but that is the theory of the students activity card. They were given activity cards for their games at the beginning of the year, and the school gives them a maximum of 100 points for each game. The cost of the activity card is $1.00. That is the philosophy of the student activity card, yet we are not given activity cards.

This has always worked to the advantage of the individual student and the student body budget. We have had

PROVO DOWNS GRANITE 32 TO 6

Cougars Surprise By Holding Colorado A. C.

The Provo high school Bulldogs emerged from their first divisional encounter Friday afternoon victorious by a score of 32 to 6 over the Granite high school of Salt Lake City who were the victim of the day.

Provo had been football all through the game. They took the lead in the second quarter after a straight march down the field while holding off when Nelson Provo right halfback, eluded several and placed the ball over the line.

Grande retaliated early in the second quarter when Charlie Johnson made a perfect forward pass to Jensen who had run a long distance and ten fenders failed to convert. This touch-down came as the result of a series of passes which had been developed from well back in Grande territory.

The Bulldogs kept well in the lead, however by speedily making another series of passes which had the tacklers to carry the ball from Grande's forty-yard line to the two yard line. The final score of 32 to 6 went over the line for Provo's second consecutive victory.

The third and fourth quarters were all Provo's. The Bulldogs scoring a total of 28 points in the last two quarters. The fourth, Grande converted but two of the five tries for goal.

In the first half of the spectacular game, there were many tricks and cutting back for many yards gain. Gales and strong winds were factors in the Provo battlefield while the line as a whole was almost faultless.

For the first time Christensen and Jensen in the battlefield showed their great running and all-around ability and their fight, and Moss, L. Walker, and Mackay battled valiantly for the ball.

We know some people around this country who think that the "Australian Ballet" is a dance.

The portable still for this week goes to the club member who thought that the prime joke of the season was to do some poaching and boil up some poor goat's head.

We are agreed that friction between the two administrations should be at least carried on behind the scenes.
